DENTISTRY.

DENTAL NOTICE.

Dr. J. H. BITZER, SURGEON DENTIST.

Office 713 Cameron street, opposite Christ Church.

GAS ADMINISTERED.

Having removed my Dental office to the above address, I wish to thank my friends and patients for past favors, and announce to them and the public generally that I am prepared to perform all operations pertaining to dentistry in the most approved manner, and solicit a share of their patronage. I will make a specialty of PAINLESS EXTRACTING and making ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and call particular attention to my local anesthesia, which I have used so successfully the past year extracting teeth painlessly. ARTIFICIAL TEETH (FULL SETS) $6 and up. I invite an examination of these teeth and comparison of prices.

No extra charge for local anesthesia.

J. H. BITZER, D. D. S., 713 Cameron Street.

THE PRICE

IS IMPORTANT—

Still it is not the chief feature. Poor Dentistry is infinitely worse than none. We solicit your patronage solely on the merits of our work. That the prices are low is merely incidental and due to superior facilities and the skill which produces rapidly. In Dentistry time is money, and if our experts, with every approved appliance, can do work QUICKER they can naturally do it CHEAPER than operators with less skill and poorer equipment. That they can do it with less pain follows as a matter of course.

Extracting, 25c. with gas, $0.50. Cleaning, 25c. Silver Fillings, 75c. Platinum, 1.00. Gold Filling according to size. Gold Crown, 1.50. 75c.

She Can Tell a Duce at Sight.

This particular Brooklyn girl detests a duce. She lives on the Heights and belongs to the inner circle of Heights society. Her opportunities for observation have been excellent and she has always availed herself of them. The more she observed the greater was her detestation. She prided herself on being an expert, and in unguarded moments has boasted just a little of her skill in entangling dukes. That is why she felt chagrined about a mistake she made on Fifth Avenue last Thursday.

It was early in the afternoon. She was walking up the avenue with a very dear friend. They had an appointment and were walking briskly. At 28th street they overtook two persons whom this Brooklyn girl at once set down as dukes of the widest stripe. They were dressed in the most extreme fashion. Their long coats had those funny little welts in the back that emphasize their English make. Their high hats, had that dashing French roll of the brim. Their hands were correctly gloved and their feet perfectly shod. With shoulders carried well back and bodies ever so slightly bent forward at the hips, with their arms properly akimbo, and their big clubs carefully carried by the wrong end, their outward appearance surely seemed to justify this Brooklyn girl's opinion.

They were strapping big fellows; either one of them might have won fame in the centre of Yale's rush line. They looked as if they could walk leagues just for amusement. That's why the leisurely, indolent way in which they sauntered up the avenue exasperated this Brooklyn girl, whose progress they unknowingly impeded when she was in a hurry.

"See the 'dear Chollies,'" she said to her friend, "swaggering up the avenue to sit in the window of their club and suck the silver end of their sticks while they try to ogle the girls who pass by."

They had crossed Twenty-ninth street and started up the little hill. "I know just what kind of dukes those fellows are," went on this Brooklyn girl. "I'll bet a box of candy I can catalogue them exactly. They inherited a lot of money, and they've been to college and abroad, but they haven't any idea of what to do with themselves or their money. They lead a perfectly useless life, and spend their time blocking their own way, just as they're blocking ours now. They never did a thing."

What she might have said was stopped by a scream of fright from up the avenue, and a hoarse shout of "Whoa! whoa!" that rose over the rumble of wheels on the noisy pavement. Coming down the hill was a beautiful brougham pulled by a spanking pair of cobs at a full run. No coachman was on the box, and the reins were dragging loosely on the ground. A white-faced woman was tugging at the catch trying to open the door. The avenue was crowded with all sorts of vehicles whose drivers struggled to get out of the path of the runaway. The snow had been melting rapidly, and the slush and mud were awful. The hoofs of the running horses and the whirling wheels of the brougham splattered the dirt in splashes over everything near.

The two strapping fellows who might have played in Yale's rush line took in the situation in a second. The Brooklyn girl was pale with fear, and her friend thought she would faint. As the runaway drew nearly abreast of these dukes the one nearest the curb dropped his cane and with a quick leap laid his neatly gloved hand on the bridle of the high horse. The next second he was off his feet and being dragged along in the muck of the street. The shock swerved the horses in toward the sidewalk but did not stop them. The second duke saw his friend's plight, and was with him at a bound. In a second it was all over. A dozen men held the trembling horses. The dukes rescued their soiled hats, shook a little of the mud and slush from their clothes, and before the frightened lady could get out of her brougham to thank them had resumed their leisurely stroll up the avenue without their elegant sticks which had been lost in the excitement.

And this Brooklyn girl, when she recovered, said to her dear friend: "Well, I never! What a mistake I made."

Harry Duval, Dr. Depew's private secretary, vouches for the truth of this story. How he knows he doesn't say. —N. Y. Sun.
